

Please let some sense come to the Cable industry. Allow a-la-carte for those who want it and let's see if it really raises rates. My guess is that it will only eliminate the wasted stations that keep getting added for a very small number of subscribers.

At this point I am considering dropping cable altogether since they keep raising the rates without offering anything more of value. This should be about consumers right to choose, not about forcing unwanted channels on everyone